COX CAN WIN.

Two months ago the Kentucky Irish American fought for an instructed delegation from Kentucky for Gov. James M. Cox, saying that he was the logical man to carry the Democratic banner to victory this year. Gov. Cox has been open and above board on all public questions and his party has fitted him with a strong platform. Cox was the choice of an unbossed convention, while Harding, the Republican nominee, was the choice of a little group of old fashioned Senators. Gov. Cox will be the people's choice.

CONVENTION IMPRESSIONS.

With only 155 delegates voting for Bryan's dry platform and 360 voting for light wines and beer at the San Francisco convention, one is impressed with the fact that not only the Democratic delegates but the public a large is tiring of the fanatical prohibition laws with all their attendant hypocrisies, secret service snoopers and the like. The day of the political prohibitionists is nearing an end and the public will now have an inning, and woe be to the candidate for Congress or Senate who boasts of his "dry" record. The liberal minded voters will play the Anti-Saloon League game of voting against the enemy regardless of party lines.

WE SHOULD WORRY.

In a special and agonizing dispatch Sunday the Courier-Journal tells us that Great Britain is again fighting with her back to the wall, Germany not whipping her this time, but the Turks on one side and the Bolsheviks on the other are the two who are crushing John Bull. Here's where seven-tenths of the world can look on without a quiver and say "we should worry."
